

Advanced Telemetry names new product distributors

Pannell Mechanical of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Phoenix-based Monza Energy Systems are now official distributors of the EcoView Commercial energy management system from Advanced Telemetry.

The company said that demand for its EcoView Commercial has surged, and the product has been proven to reduce utility bills by as much as 25 percent and deliver a return on investment in just 6 to 12 months.

Advanced Telemetry is continuing to consider new distributors in all markets throughout the U.S.

"Because both of these partners are well versed in HVAC climate control systems — the largest, discretionary source of resource demand — they are particularly well-suited to represent our EcoView Commercial product line," said Gus Ezcurra, CEO of Advanced Telemetry.

"With its robust tracking and reporting capabilities, EcoView Commercial provides invaluable real-time insight into our customers' climate control and energy consumption activities at each given location," added Jody Romans, vice president of Monza Energy Systems. "With this usage information and the system's real-time control capability, we're now well-positioned to help business owners reduce their energy consumption, utility bills and carbon footprint at one or multiple locations."

