

The Dish

Best beets

FoodieView.com wants President Barack Obama to know that beets aren't all bad.

Just when this rather homey tuber thought it was finally getting the recognition it deserved in home kitchens, trend-setting restaurants and the press alike, along comes Obama to give it a bad rap: "I always avoid eating them," said Obama in one report, relegating beets to the joke mill occupied until now by George H.W. Bush's uneaten broccoli crowns.

FoodieView — a food portal with recipe search engine, restaurant guide, cookbook reviews, newsletter and free recipe box tool — has a collection of beet recipes, 20,250 to be exact, that just might change the president's mind. These include:

- Beet and Goat Cheese Salad with Pistachios
- Beet Ravioli with Poppy Seed Butter
- Beet Carpaccio with Goat Cheese and Mint Vinaigrette
- Romaine and Roasted-Beet Salad with Creamy Roquefort Dressing
- Roasted Beets with Horse-radish Cream
- Beet and Goat Cheese Crostini
- Beet Bundt Cake
- Balsamic Baked Beets with Red Onions and Hazelnuts
- Moroccan Beet Salad

Printing imperfections present during scanning

