THE LUXE LIST:

SWEET WAYS TO SHOP FOR BREAST CANCER AWARENESS

October is Breast Cancer Awareness Month. Right now, many companies are donating a portion of their proceeds to organizations that support women with breast cancer and breast cancer research. Here are a few items you'll enjoy while doing good!

NATURE NATE'S HONEY

This honey is as nature intended – and very different from your typical grocery store honey. It's treated with very low heat, keeping all important enzymes intact. It's also unfiltered, which means it still contains pollen and retains the best flavor, aroma and nutrition naturally. Lastly, Nature Nate's is made by 100 percent American bees, helping to eliminate pesticides and ensuring the highest quality product. The company offers two great options. The first is Nature Nate's Raw & Unfiltered Honey, which is made by American bees and comes straight from the hive. It has not been cooked, and the pollens have not been filtered out. Each batch is tested for a high pollen count and a clean read of corn syrup adulteration, pesticides, herbicides and antibiotics before going into the bottle. Nature Nate's Honey Tins serve as a sweet gift for neighbors, teachers or family members. Choose from five beautiful designs, including Kitchen, Leaves, Berries, Fall Blooms and Wood Grain. Each tin includes one 16-ounce bottle of Nature Nate's Honey. Also cause conscious, Nature Nate's has partnered with the National Breast Cancer Foundation and has committed to making a $75,000 donation. Additionally, the company is donating honey packets to be included in the NBCF's Hope Kits, which are distributed to cancer survivors throughout the country.

SPARKLING ICE
PINK GRAPEFRUIT

This sparkling water has the subtly sweet taste of tangy grapefruit that's so delicious, it'll be love at first sip. You'll also love that this zero-calorie, naturally flavored sparkling water brand proudly displays a Pink Ribbon on its Pink Grapefruit bottle all year long, with the caption "a portion of the proceeds will be donated to fund breast cancer research." This year alone, Sparkling Ice has already contributed more than $140,000 to research and sponsorship/support of Susan G Komen Affiliates Race for the Cure and Wings of Karen Bra Dashes across the country. First created in the Pacific Northwest in the early 1990s, Sparkling Ice makes a portfolio of refreshingly bold sparkling waters, teas and lemonades. Bursting with real fruit flavor and just the right amount of fizz, Sparkling Ice delivers 19 irresistible fruit combinations without all the calories.

FORD WARRIORS
IN PINK APPAREL

Ford Motor Company has been in the fight against breast cancer for 22 years and offers a line of Warriors in Pink apparel. My faves of this season, priced between $10 and $40, include the Handful of Hope Gloves, the Courage Cap, Inner & Outer Peace Vest and the super cute and comfy Women's Tank, emblazoned with bold graphics. Warriors in Pink donates 100 percent of the net proceeds of its wear and gear to four breast cancer charities that consumers can choose from during checkout, including Susan G. Komen, The Pink Fund, The Young Survivors Coalition and The Dr. Susan Love Foundation.
