

GO: A Kidd's Guide to Graphic Design

by Chip Kidd

Design is all around you. From an exit sign to a speed bump to the back of a shampoo bottle, everything that is not made by nature is designed by someone. It affects the decisions you make every day. And whether you realize it or not, you are already a designer – now you can become a great one. Learn how to create visuals that are dynamic, interesting, and appealing with GO: A Kid's Guide to Graphic Design!

The Core Cord Organizer

Maybe you need to listen to recorded notes or lectures. Maybe you just need to throw on some music to block out the noise and dive into your studies. Maybe you just need a break! Whatever the case may be, it's always best to stay organized. The Core is a very simple and affordable cord organizer that keeps your headphone cable from getting tangled, which they seem to love doing!

Animal Clips

For young children, boredom is the number one culprit to poor performance. Animal clips contribute to the stimulation kids require to learn and stay organized. Use them to organize cables, hold pencils, or any other purpose you can think up. These clips are available in almost every animal that kids know and love, from the brave, roaring (but cute) lion to the savage (but cute) T-rex!

The Public Zoo Mobile Speaker

The bēm wireless Mobile Speaker lets you hear what you want, when and where you want, without the old limits of space (put it anywhere), time (pair & play in moments), appearances (three cool or cute colors with The Public Zoo designs), cost, or size. In fact, it measures barely 2.5" cubed—that's slightly smaller than a tennis ball, so when you bring it to the court, it's less intrusive than your water bottle. Sound good? Why yes, actually, it sounds great. Rich, precision-tuned... kinda hard to believe, for something so conveniently connected, via Bluetooth, with your smart phone, iPod®, tablet, or more!
