ARMORED TRUCK SPILLS $200,000 ON HIGHWAY!

$100,000 STILL MISSING

AN OHIO street turned into a feeding frenzy as cash-hungry people made a mad scramble for $200,000 that tumbled out the back of an armored truck!

After a money bag fell off the truck and split open without the driver noticing, drivers and pedestrians in Columbus quickly started pocketing as many of the bills as possible.

"People were jumping out of their vehicles," says an eyewitness. "It was like throwing some fish into a school of piranha that haven't eaten in a long time. It was funny."

Another eyewitness says folks were laughing, smiling and grabbing as much moolah as they could carry. After cops arrived on the scene, employees at a nearby flower shop helped them corral as much of the windblown windfall as possible. Later, other honest people turned in cash at the police station. Still, sources say, only $100,000 has been recovered — the other half is still missing.

Police are viewing cell phone photos and surveillance tapes to identify those who haven't turned over the cash they gathered.

But Abdur Manjaroe, 50, says he's keeping his eyes peeled for wayward bills: "I'll consider it a blessing — how are you going to penalize me for a blessing?"
